

Health Care Policy Intern

The Long Term Care Community Coalition (LTCCC) is a non-profit organization that works to improve conditions for long term care consumers, such as nursing home residents, assisted living and adult home residents, and people in managed long term care. We accomplish our goals through policy research and analysis, advocacy and education of the general public, the news media and policy makers.

The Long Term Care Community Coalition:

- ❑ Identifies shortcomings in the delivery of long term care;
- ❑ Researches issues impacting care of the elderly and disabled;
- ❑ Develops recommendations for improvement;
- ❑ Advocates for laws and policies to improve care and
- ❑ Actively engages government agencies and elected officials in discussion and action on the needed changes.

We are looking for interns to contribute to our policy research and advocacy activities. Selected individual(s) will have the opportunity to do their own research, participate in the development of advocacy initiatives and take part in writing materials for the media, consumers and the general public as well as policy and research papers.

In addition, there will be opportunities to contribute to Coalition development and organizational activities, attend meetings and meet with community and political leaders. Scheduling is flexible, and work can be done in our out of our office, located a block from Penn Station. The position is unpaid.

Qualifications: Strong analytical, writing and communication skills. Knowledge of Internet research and Microsoft Office programs essential.

Application process: Please send resume and writing sample to Sara@ltccc.org.

